

ELLORA CAVES

Ellora, Aurangabad, Maharashtra, India

God

The Ellora Caves are celebrated for its Hindu, Buddhist and Jain temples and monuments which were carved from the local cliff rock in the 6th to 9th century C.E. Ellora is the most important second-wave site of ancient rock-cut architecture in India. The monuments [34 caves] are excavated out of the vertical face of the Khuldabad escarpment to face westwards. They extend in a north-south line and are numbered in a continuous sequence. Buddhist monuments (Caves 1-12) occupy the southernmost part of the site, while Hindu monuments (Caves 13-29) are located in the middle, towards the north are a small number of Jain excavations (Caves 30-34). Despite this strictly linear arrangement, the dramatic focus of the site is undoubtedly the magnificent achievement of Cave 16, the famous Kailasa.

Interesting Facts

The Ellora caves locally known as 'Verul Leni', Ellora represents the epitome of Indian rock-cut architecture.

Ellora is also world famous for the largest single monolithic excavation in the world, the great Kailasa (Cave 16).
